To Francis Jackson

[Cummington, Mass.] Writing in behalf of Mr. L. Packard in answer to the circular of June 30, the writer transmits the message that nothing can be done, and encloses one dollar from each, Mr. Packard and himself. Sketches the situation in the town, where a minister calls the Liberator a dangerous and hurtful paper. The writer has heard only three supposedly abolition lectures for 18 months, and these from the Liberty Party's agents. One of the Congregational preachers denounces "Garrison and his mess." Most people here identify genuine abolitionism with voting the Liberty ticket. The writer declares himself for the principles of abolition held by the Liberator. The Macedonian c[illegible]ould have sounded "long and loud" in Garrison's ears t[illegible] from Northampton and help, but for the anxiety felt fo[illegible]s health.

Wise claimed that W.L.G. had approved of certain statements made by «J. H. Noyes» and that later J. H. N. had argued in favor of "a promiscuous cohabitation of the sexes." Wise held that because W.L.G. had commented favorably on the earlier article, he therefore also approved of the later one.

[South Dartmouth, Mass.] The writer appreciates an opportunity to do something for the slave. Says he was in Washington recently. Gives a dialogue of the slave markets. Attacks the slave trade in the District of Columbia. "...He [Gov. MacDuffie] lifts a warning voice, and says (in his late message) if Congress abolishes slavery in the District of Columbia - South Carolina, together with other slave holding states will consider themselves absolved from all constitutional jurisdiction & will consequently secede from the Union." Thinks the abolition of slavery would prevent the dissolution of the Union by removing "the cause [illegible]ontention." No.29

To Caroline Weston

‹Dedham, Mass.› The writer describes a difficult journey out of town. Tells that "Miss Braston ... has been obeying ‹George› Thompson's injunction to cry aloud since she has been in Dedham." The writer comments on Dedham's attitude toward Abolition: "The people are in a deplorable state of ignorance"; but, in spite of prejudice, they would like to hear Mr. Thompson. The writer read a chapter by Mrs. Lydia Maria Child on prejudice to Mr. Foord, and heard that Mrs. Child has lately invited colored people to a party.

«Dedham, Mass.» The writer reports on an informal meeting of the Dedham Female Anti-Slavery Society. As the majority will probably side with the New Organization, the question arises as to whether "the Old Platform women" should form a new society or should pass resolutions that they will co-operate, for the present, with the Boston Female Anti-Slavery Society and the Massachusetts Society. The writer inclines to the latter plan, "as the necessity of exclusively women's Societies seems to be superseded by the admission of them on equal terms in the men's societies." Asks for the addressee's opinion. "Mrs. Houghton seems [illegible] be a Mary Parker in little." The writer lectured in Have[illegible] yesterday to a full audience. Sends a letter from A. «Dedham, Mass.» The writer planned to call at the addressee's house on his way to Worcester, but his wife's ill health kept him at home. Does not feel that he plays an important part at conventions. Refers to the call to the Chardon St. Convention and the behavior of Oliver Johnson in regard to it. Is troubled chiefly on Garrison's account.

[Dedham, Mass.] The writer was not prepared for the thousand dollars (transmitted by John A. Collins). Emphasizes the obligation to help Collins "to place him in his true position before the English Abolitionists." Sympathizes with the addressee's indignation at N. Colver, but advises her not to worry about his punishment. "Don't you know that he is damned already?" Elaborates on this idea. Describes a book called Child Album by J. S. C. Abbott, which presents a "notion of Heaven" that seems to the writer neither attractive nor convincing. The writer misses the Chapmans. Tells of a meeting in Dedham to hear Garrison. Refers to "[Joel P.] Bishop's and John Smith's absurdities in connection with the next Anti-Slavery meeting. Objects to holding the meeting at Hines Chapel.

‹Dedham, Mass.› The writer was present at all the meetings of the Committee of 25 (at the annual meeting of the American A.S. Society). "It was conceded on all hands that there was not material in N.Y. to make an effective Ex‹ecutive› Com‹mittee› — J‹ames› S‹loan› G‹ibbons› being in effect the only person of whom the Soc. knew anything." Garrison, Collins, and others urged removal of the American Society to Boston. Thomas Earle suggested the appointment, in the neighborhood of Boston, of an Executive Committee who should do the business, while the nominal location of the Society would continue to be New York. All conceded that this was t[illegible] best arrangement. "It was fully understood, as I conceive, [illegible] everything was to be done by the quorum in Boston - that [illegible] committee in N.Y. was to be «Dedham, Mass.» Writes in humorous vein. "King James «Sloan Gibbons» sways his lawful scepter umolested and the baffled conspirators are mourning over the ruin of their hopes." Considers him a new proof of Chancellor Oxenstiern's saying that it is marvelous how little wisdom it takes to govern the world The writer does not think that Gibbons "had sense enough to show our letters to Mrs. «Lydia Maria» Child who would have understood them." Thinks that at the next annual meeting "the whole Hopper clique" will be removed and Jones put in to stand for the American Society at New York. Commends the progress of the Hundred Conventions. C[illegible]s L. Remond has consented to go into the field at $100 per[illegible]m. The writer quotes an ironic remark on S.S. Foster and his "courting expenses." Comments on the resiliency of John A. Collins's health.

«Dedham, Mass.» The writer is pretty well satisfied with his article on Garrison and (Daniel) O'Connell. In it he states that O'Connell eulogised Garrison in a public speech in 1840 and that he identified himself publicly with American Abolitionism. Asks if he is mistaken in either point. Playfully threatens that if Anne W. Weston does not treat him well, he will send her back to Weymouth and have little Emma Weston back again. "She is worth all the rest of you put together." Joshua Leavitt said that the writer's statements are "the reverse of the truth." Leavitt intends to make an explanatory statement(in the Lowell Cou[illegible]). "It is a long time since I have seen a man, white or black, that I have cottoned to so much as I have to Brown..." Says he is the sub-editor of the Rev. Charles Spear. Went to a reception for President Polk. Not many people turned out to see him. Describes the meager welcome given the Presidential procession. "What do they say in N.B. to the re-affiancing of Anna Motley to Alfred Rodman?" "Miss Shaw, the daughter of the Chief Justice, is engaged to Typee Melville (Herman Me[illegible])". Mentions Deborah Yerrinton's latest literary effo[illegible]nd his own letters. Tells of «Dedham, Mass.?» The writer reports on a Board meeting of the Mass. Anti-Slavery Society. Addison Davis is "getting up a quarrel with us. He was not satisfied with the agency we gave him in the Spring ... we are inclined to throw him overboard." Fears there will be trouble with F. Douglass's compensation, as he supposedly thinks his services worth more than anyone else's. "Sam May seems full of business & works well." The writer will spend the night with him in Leicester, and then attend the First of August meeting in Worcester. The writer saw Mrs. Maria (White) Lowell at Nahant, looking beautiful, but ill. A fragment [illegible] description (on the reverse of the signed page) is concer[illegible]ith a Unitarian minister, "the translator of Undine & author of some 'Minor Romances'..." (Thomas Tracy) and his wife.

‹Dedham, Mass.› The writer forwards a letter from S. H. Gay dealing apparently with the question of an advertisement. Asks when the addressee and her sisters can attend a Board meeting, to consider, among other matters, "whether anything, & if anything what should be done to botch up the Howitt people?" This should be settled at the first Board meeting "after the article appeared." The writer has received the note from the addressee and Anne W. Weston "about the Unitarians." However, lacking the necessary documents needed for an article on this subject, the writer "took the Wilmot Proviso as leader."

To "My Dear Friend" «Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman»

«Dedham, (Mass.)» The writer encloses a letter of S. May Jr. explaining the problem of the disposition of the fund left by Francis Jackson. May recalls that Jackson and C. F. Hovey were opposed to the use of Anti-Slavery funds for the support of the National Anti-Slavery Standard. The objections of both Jackson and Hovey were overruled by Garrison. The addressee claimed that it was not of vital importance "that all of the $10,000 should go to the Freedmen, instead of half," but it would be better if it did. The trustees must present their views on the use of the fund to the Master in Chancery, and Jackson's opinion might [illegible]fect the Master's decision.

To Caroline Weston No.46

‹Deerfield, Mass.› The writer regrets that he cannot give all the assistance she may need in her labors in this region. Recommends Heath as "one of the most moral & respectable towns in this section of the country," with an interest in the subject of slavery. The writer is sending the "Franklin Mercury" with an account of the ‹Anti-Slavery› Society formed at Heath. Mentions by name several gentlemen who would be able to give the addressee information relative to the county. The writer is doubtful about the probable success of petitioning Congress.

«Dorchester, Mass.» The writer is living in an anti-slavery desert, and yearns for abolition sympathy. Has tried all kinds of people, "but they talk a different language or say nothing." Wishes she might always feel "the faith and hope that seems to shine in Mrs.Follen's countenance and conversation." Tells of the illness that kept the writer from the annual meeting, and of Mr.(Increase)Smith's confining occupations. Admires Garrison's "piece" on a free press. C.L.Remond delivered two fine lectures here, but they were attended by next to nobody. Asks if Sydney (Howard Gay) is enjoying the honeymoon. The writer has been reading Gibbons, is attending a history class and studyi[illegible]rman. "The early Christians were very much like thenon[illegible]stants and comeouters of the present time..." But the writer's friends know nothing of these contemporary movements.

Is glad that"so pleasant an arrangement has been made for Miss Chapman so that her family losses will in part be made up by your sister and her children." Mrs. M. W. Chapman's giving up of her house will, according to E.Quincy, require the discontinuance of the Anti-Slavery fair, as there would be no other place in the city to store the goods. To Samuel Joseph May

‹Dorchester, Mass.› The writer acknowledges the receipt of a letter from S. J. May, which he praises highly. Refers to S. J. May's gift to the Anti-Slavery Standard, which the writer misunderstood. Criticizes Sallie Holley for disregarding S. J. May's instructions that his donation was not for the Standard, and for another breach of trust of a similar nature. Discusses the advisability of writing to the Standard to correct false impressions created by Wendell Phillips. Says that Gerrit Smith was also misquoted by Phillips. Condemns Phillips' attacks on Garrison. Says Parker Pillsbury and others have quarreled with Phillips over the introduction of the question of woman suffrage. [illegible]inks Phillips was right on this issue. Criticizes Pillsbur[illegible] Mentions Lucy Stone. Tells about a meeting of the trustees of the Jackson bequest. [Duxbury, Mass.] The writer describes the difficulties of the drive to Duxbury, due to the stubbornness of the horse. Tells about the people she has seen in Duxbury; has viewed Gershom Weston's new house, which "too much resembles a hotel." The writer is troubled by the death of Mrs. Collins; expects (John A.) Collins to marry again by the end of the year. Refers to the new baby girl of Mrs. Maria W. Chapman, thinks "Gertrude" a very good name, but suggests various family names, also "Harriet Martineau," and remarks that the name of Weston does not occur in any of the children's names. Asks why Mr. and Mrs. Davi[illegible] Child don't write for the National Anti-Slavery Stan[illegible] Complains of ill health with great pain or "terrible languor" as the main symptoms. To Robert Purvis No.28

[Fall River, Mass.] The writer thinks often of his friends in Philadelphia, and takes courage from the evidence he witnessed there of the colored people's "rapidly rising prospects." Is especially eager to see the recommendation of the Convention respecting Phoenix Societies speedily carried out. "Having for the year past engaged in no other business but that connected with the Anti-Slavery cause," and wishing to devote his life to it, the writer would be glad to settle with his wife and daughter in Philadelphia "and engage in the establishment and promotion of the objects of Phoenix Societies." Would hope to win several thousand members within one year, each paying twenty cents quarterly. A library might be maintained for the use of members and lectures held "for their «Fitchburg,Mass.» The writer has sympathized with the addressee in the recent trials. "These movements have made husband and myself more thorough garrisonites than ever." Ministerial influence in Fitchburg is against reforms. That the writer's "very dear brother, J«ohn» E. Fuller should join the crusade against Garrison, is painful." The writer feels almost safe in pledging her (anti-slavery) society to the Massachusetts interests. Soon after the rupture occasioned by the Fitchburg Resolutions the society voted to take $12 worth of the Liberator and to send an expression of sympathy for its editor. Many friends wish Garrison and Wendell Phillips to lecture at Fitchburg.

[Foxborough, Mass.] The writer explains the delay in sending information requested by the addressee. She attended the lectures by Alanson St. Clair, which pleased all that heard them. He spoke very highly of his friend Garrison. "I watched him suspiciously learning from the Liberator that there was some disaffection in the ranks of the Abolition[ists]." At the close of the lecture he urgently sought subscribers for the Massachusetts Abolitionist and, none coming forward, he also invited subscriptions for the Liberator, denying that the Abolitionist was got up in opposition to the Liberator. The writer, on inquiring of a fr[illegible] with whom St. Clair stayed, learned that the latter did [illegible] approve of all of Mr. Garrison's measures. The writer regrets the apathy of people in

To "My dear Friend" [Anne Warren Weston?]

[Gloucester, (Mass.)] The writer spoke to Garrison on the subject of purchasing slaves. "I told him I was surprised at his editorial in last week's Liberator headed 'An appeal to the benevolent.'" In this Garrison said "were he a slave he should be glad to be purchased to get his freedom." The writer describes his quiet summer life. Referring to the addressee's ability to read Tasso, the writer says that he never expects to be able to read the poetry of Tasso and Dante, but hopes to be able to read that of Alfieri some day.
